

Michael Perry — Candidate for New Mexico State Land Commissioner

Michael Perry is a lifelong advocate for New Mexico's lands, waters, and wildlife. A native New Mexican born in Santa Fe, Michael attended school at New Mexico State University, where he earned a bachelor's degree in Wildlife Science. With decades of hands-on experience in habitat restoration, watershed management, and land stewardship, he brings unmatched expertise to the role of State Land Commissioner.

Michael is currently serving a four-year term as the Vice Chair County Commissioner for Chaves County. He also sits on the Public Lands Advisory Committee for the National Association of Counties, where he works to represent New Mexico's interests and ensure the responsible use of public lands nationwide.

Michael served for over 20 years as a game warden with the New Mexico Department of Game and Fish, protecting the state's wildlife and enforcing conservation laws with fairness and dedication.

As a former Assistant Commissioner at the New Mexico State Land Office, he oversaw millions of acres of state trust land, ensuring they were managed responsibly and productively. He founded Wildlife and Habitat Prescriptions in 2012, prior to retiring, a business that partners with ranchers across southern New Mexico to implement science-driven conservation strategies that work for both the land and the people who depend on it.

Michael is a dedicated husband of 30 years to his wife Kimberly and proud father to their son Colton. An outdoor enthusiast and hunter, he understands the value of public access and responsible use of our natural resources. His passion for protecting and expanding public access is at the heart of his commitment to the people of New Mexico.

Michael also recognizes the vital role that the oil and gas industry plays in New Mexico's economy. Revenue generated from oil and gas leases on state trust lands directly supports public schools, universities, and hospitals across the state. These funds are critical to educating our children, advancing research, and providing essential healthcare services. As Land Commissioner, Michael will work to ensure responsible development that balances economic opportunity with environmental stewardship — protecting our land while fueling our future.

As wildfires grow more severe and frequent, Michael understands that proactive land management is critical to reducing risk and protecting communities. These fires have caused devastating losses — homes, livelihoods, livestock, and even lives. Michael will support increased thinning projects, prescribed burns, and strategic grazing practices to create healthier forests and rangelands. By partnering with fire professionals, landowners, and local governments, the State Land Office can play a powerful role in preventing and responding to deadly wildfires while helping communities recover and rebuild.

Michael also champions New Mexico's deep agricultural heritage. He believes our farmers and ranchers are the backbone of the rural economy and key stewards of the land. As Land Commissioner, he will ensure that state lands remain accessible for grazing, agriculture, and food production — supporting rural livelihoods and sustaining the traditions that have defined New Mexico for generations.

Now, Michael is running as a Republican for New Mexico State Land Commissioner to ensure our lands are managed with integrity, transparency, and a deep respect for the people who call New Mexico home. His mission: restore trust, protect resources, and put land back to work for all New Mexicans.
